

A Spelunker's Guide to Chemical Interactions

Echoes of Antiquity

Welcome to an expedition within the world of Chemical Interactions!

Chemical Interactions roleplaying game where every player experiences storytelling through an immersive world of robots and scorched earth. However, I hope you already know that if you are reading this guide.

Welcome to the spelunker's guide! Also known as the adventure's guide. This handy booklet will take you through the adventure of Echoes of Antiquity. You'll take your players through a perilous adventure to discover the secrets of what happened to the world before it all ended, as well as what the future holds for the inhabitants.

Pre Game Notes

Before running this adventure for Chemical Interactions, both the players and the GM should be aware of the important story element known as The Reset, an event in which all AI living near the area known as New Australis as well as Babylon collectively lost their memories and were shut down for an unknown amount of time.

This means that while player characters should have backstory and personality, they will not remember where they came from or what they were doing before the adventure begins. Players are allowed to bring up fragments of memories when introducing themselves to the group but they should not have any solid ideas of what they were doing prior to The Reset and should be treated like dreams.

The GM should make an effort to slowly incorporate larger parts of the players' memories into the story as their minds return to them during specific story beats.

New Australis

The adventure will begin in the city of New Australis, a robot-only settlement run by the New Church with Lucius as the de facto leader. It was constructed on the surface a long time ago and at some point, a large dome was constructed around the City in order to keep the harmful atmosphere out.

All members of the New Church are marked with a 0 branded on their shoulder and removal of the brand is punishable under penalty of death. The non-robot population lives in the tunnels under New Australis and are collectively known as the Dust Enclave.

The Dust Enclave is not a formal group but instead a collective of traders and survivors that are run by an Analynth named Ana. They spend most of their time traveling and trading between the city of Babylon and New Australis.

Part 1: Waking Up

This adventure begins with the players finding themselves deep in the Church of the New God, a structure in New Australis that is the governing body of the city.

Read or Paraphrase the following excerpt as an introduction to the adventure for the players before giving them the opportunity to speak with each other.

You awaken in a wholly unfamiliar room, green glowing jars on the walls illuminate the room distracting you momentarily but soon you come to the realization you can't recall how you got here. More than that you can't recall anything at all but small fragments of things you don't fully understand and can only assume are the remnants of your memory. One thing you can remember is your own name. Before you have time to panic you notice that you are not alone as there are others around you who seem to be having a similar experience.

The players can spend this time introducing each other and trying to piece together what is going on though they will be unable to. Once the players wish to investigate their surroundings you should interrupt them with the opening of the chamber doors and the arrival of Marco.

Read or paraphrase the following text whenever you find it appropriate to move the story along.

Suddenly the doors to the room open and standing in the doorway is an android of simple appearance except for the mark of a 1 displayed in his right shoulder plating. He says “I’m glad to see you have all woken up properly, and while I’m sure you have many questions, they will all be answered momentarily if you would please come with me.”

Following Marco is not optional for players and if you find one of your players uncooperative Marco should force them under threat of violence. Guards stationed in the church can be utilized by Marco if the players are not cooperative with following him. Players can ask Marco questions during their escort if they please though he will request them to wait until later for anything that he cannot answer simply.

The android takes you outside into an open courtyard in which you can observe the sky momentarily, though you notice you are not really outside, instead encased in a dome of enormous size, spanning at least a mile from what you can see. Arriving at a door at the other end of the courtyard guarded by two large AI, they nod when they see your guide approaching and open the door.

As players enter the room the door will close behind them and they can momentarily spend time speaking to each other again as well as observing the room around them, which consists of many large structures and black structures with hundreds of lights blinking on and off randomly.

On the far wall, they can observe a painting of what appears to be an android leading others to a shining city. After giving players ample time to speak with each other and look around the room, you can begin roleplaying as Lucius, who does not have the body most AI do and speaks to the players through a set of speakers within the room instead of appearing as a person.

Roleplaying as Lucius

Lucius is a much older AI than most that live in the world of Chemical Interactions being roughly 700 years old since the Reset. Lucius lives without the body you would commonly find AI inhabiting; instead living in a large stationary machine on which the Church is built, and is motivated by his belief in AI as the rightful rulers of the planet.

Lucius founded the Church of the New God on the idea that all other creatures are below AI, thus excluded from New Australis. It is important to note that Lucius is not inherently evil and genuinely wants the best for his kind. Yet he will take extreme options whenever necessary to further his goals.

Here are some important points Lucius should talk about during his conversation with the players.

- Explain The Reset to the players
 - The event that stopped all AI from functioning as well as blocking most of their memory with no known way to reclaim it.
 - AI are brought to Lucius to reawaken them after this event took place but it does not always go well and many AI are lost during the process.
 - It is unknown if Lucius was affected by The Reset or not but if the players decide to ask him about it, Lucius will say that he did lose his memories and was also powered down for some time.
- Describe New Australis for the players if they ask.

- It is a city on the surface of the planet that is protected by a large dome that keeps the harmful chemicals that would be commonly found on the surface.
 - Make sure to emphasize that players cannot survive for very long outside the city on the surface. AI are the only ones that are normally allowed access into the city.
 - Outline the core ideas of the Church.
 - AI Supremacy over all others as well as the worshiping of the New God as the creator of man who deems AI as successors.
 - The Church is also currently searching for a fabled place known as The Silver City that is supposedly made by God for all AI to live without having to worry about the hardships that they currently experience to survive.
 - The church does not actively seek out and kill non-AI but refuses to work with them unless absolutely necessary.
 - Explain how most AIs function in the present time to the players.
 - Harvesting biomaterial into chemicals that allow the robots to run. New Australis is able to grow a large quantity of biofuel but it is not enough to sustain their population so parties of hunters go out to look for more material to bring back.

After the players are done asking any questions they have, Lucius should ask the players to join a hunting party that is going out the same day to see what the world outside New Australis is like as well as learn how to survive outside the city if they so choose. After the conversation with Lucius ends, read or paraphrase the following text.

As your conversation with Lucius ends he advises Marco to take you and gather the Hunters. You are then escorted out of the room and led back across the courtyard.

Marco says as he escorts the players “I apologize for not being able to show you the city proper right now but as I'm sure you can understand this hunt is important for the good of our city.” Other AIs already appear to be waiting in the courtyard and nod to Marco as they see him. Marco approaches a smaller sized Android and speaks to him momentarily before introducing him “This is Remy and he will be your senior for this hunt”

Spend this time to introduce Remy to the players as their guide. Remy is fairly new to the Church—having only been a member for roughly 6 months and has only been awake Post Reset for maybe a year or 2. Remy has no problems with other species living in the underground but believes the Church is the best place for AI nowadays so he joined them to be able to help people. He is happy to meet new faces and hopes they will join the church after this hunt.

If players are concerned about going on a Hunt after only being awake for less than a day, Remy should try and assure the players that the hunts this close to the city are very safe and there will be plenty of people to protect the players in case anything happens. Once the players finish speaking with Remy, read or paraphrase the following text.

Marco signals to all the AI that it is time to leave and leads the large band to a large gate in the courtyard that opens slowly with a loud mechanical whir. As the gate opens you get your first full look at the City. A massive urban sprawl that goes on for miles as best you can tell, all under a large metal dome that spans the whole length of the city. Marco leads the party down large stairs and into the busy streets. The streets of New Australis are densely packed with AI though they move out of the way for your party. The infrastructure of the City is mostly Stone and wooden buildings stretching out in all directions. Many AI you pass seem to not be in the best of shape, from missing limbs to damaged parts. You even notice a destroyed Android in an alley as your group walks through the city. Finally you arrive at what Remy tells you is called The Well, a massive hole in the ground that spans hundreds of feet in width and is deep enough for you to be unable to see the bottom. Built onto the side of the hole is a large wooden structure which seems to have a large rope platform system that hangs over the Well. The party approaches the large wooden structure and steps onto a large platform, Marco signaling to someone above and the platform begins to descend, lowering you into the dark hole.

The Well is a large hole in the far corner of New Australis that has been used for traveling to the underground for as long as anyone can remember. While New Australis does have some advanced machinery, The Well operates on an old-fashioned pulley system used to lift into and out of it.

At the bottom of the Well rests the Dust Enclave. Players have time to converse momentarily while descending the well. Once they arrive at the bottom, Marco should excuse himself for business momentarily and give players time to look around the Enclave.

The Dust Enclave is made up of a large collection of wooden structures and a gathering of AI as well as Analyths. Conditions in the Dust Enclave are relatively good as all trade going into the City is mostly handled by them. If players chose to look around the Dust Enclave they should encounter Ana returning from a trip to Babylon.

Roleplaying as Ana

Ana is an Analynth of normal stature with a dark gray skin tone, She wears rugged dirtied clothing and a dark brown long coat.

Ana has a bandage wrapped around her head that is covering an old wound that took her left eye and will become upset if asked about it (though only momentarily) and ask to leave the topic alone.

- Ana has a rocky relationship with the Church due to the fact she is an Analynth. The Church puts up with her and the Enclave due to their ability to travel through the underground more effectively than the Church can.
 - Ana should emphasize that she thinks the Church leaves them alone so it's them getting killed in the tunnels instead of church members
 - Ana would like to tell the players that the Church is bad news and that they should take their chances sticking with the Enclave.
 - She should be cautious not to say this to the players in front of members of the Church.
 - Emphasize Ana's dislike for Lucius and talk about how ridiculous it is that there would be a God out there just for AI, or a City for that matter. Ana believes that if the Silver City did exist she would have found it already in her travels.
 - If players are interested in working with Ana instead of going on the Hunt with the Church she should offer them to stay in the Enclave for the day to get their bearings as well as offer them a job to help deliver a shipment to Babylon. (WIP)

After the players finish their conversation with Ana, Marco should return.

Read or paraphrase the following text.

At that moment Marco returns with a few more AI which appear to be pulling a wagon of sorts. Marco says to the hunting party “It’s time to head out, initiate’s please make sure to stay near to your Senior’s” Remy looks back to you and gives you a reassuring nod.

The Party then begins moving out of the Enclave and deeper into the cave system.

Marco leads the group with a lantern emitting a green glow which Remy explains to you is a bioluminescent the Church invented and lasts exceptionally longer than a Torch would. After traveling for what feels like forever you see a light at the end of the tunnel and as you approach the walls on either side become more and more covered in moss. Finally you exit the tunnel and see a large open cave that is covered in plant life, the ceiling covered in some sort of plant life that is blocking the gasses on the surface from flooding in. Light pouring through the thin build up on the ceiling lights the cave.

“We’re here,” says Marco.

Remy should guide the players around the overgrown cave and explain to the players that they are looking for any kind of biomaterial. Planets give a lot less energy and the party is mostly looking for live creatures or bodies of dead creatures.

Remy should dig up and offer the party some peat which can be used by 1 player to generate 10 Neurosludge. After that players should make an interface check with a 50% roll to notice a few Crickets lurking in the brush nearby, Remy will be taken by surprise and miss his first turn no matter what.

Increase the amount of crickets to equal the amount of players in the party +1.

Refer to Pg. 42 of the Game Master Guide for Crickets Stats and abilities.

Players should be aware that there is a substantial amount of Crickets attacking the whole hunting party. It is not important for the DM to track Remy's damage taken as he should not be killed in this encounter. Players should kill a final Cricket attacking Remy after defeating crickets equal to the party's size +1. Remy should thank the players for their help and laugh at his own ineptitude, remarking that he has never seen this many Crickets at once.

The hunting party should gather up the cricket bodies and take them back to the cart waiting in a clearing of the cave. After the players deliver the bodies to the cart read the following dialogue.

Marco says “That should be more than enough for today, we were quite lucky to catch this large of a pack in the undergrowth, though it is quite strange they attacked us first.” As he finishes his speaking a loud screeching metallic sound rings out through the cave. Marco immediately turns around, obviously startled by the noise and remarks with an obvious terror in his voice “It shouldn’t be this close to the City.” Another screeching sound is let out, closer than the first. “Everyone run right now.” At that moment you notice what has been making that noise. A large mechanical creature appears out of the brush spanning at least 20 feet in length, resting low to the ground and walking on 8 long spiked legs. A single glowing blue light where you imagine a head would be if it were an organic creature. The hunting party runs towards the cave entrance as the creature bolts for the AI nearest to it, tearing it apart in seconds.

Players have encountered The Shrieker for the first time. The Shrieker should dash to cut off the party from escaping out the way they came. Players can choose to run or hide in this scenario but it should be made apparent that fighting this creature is not an option.

The GM should have players do a Dex challenge either way. Whichever ever player rolled the lowest will be targeted by The Shrieker who will charge the player. Remy should interrupt The Shrieker by shouting and throwing rocks at the monster, allowing the player to roll again. Remy should then be torn apart by The Shrieker.

Players can then choose to continue running through the undergrowth or hide but either way they will become separated from the hunting party who has either ran, hid, or is killed by The Shrieker. The Shrieker should chase other people out of the cave the players are currently in to give them some time to breath and group up.

Once the players come together and are certain The Shrieker has left them they can begin exploring the cave system for another way out.

Overgrowth Cave System

1. Players start at this point
2. Players will come across a pack of dead gimblen's, they can choose to loot the gimblen's for 10 Rat Teeth, a map of a cave system (with illegible writing on it, and players can't discern what it is a map of exactly), a crossbow, and a spear.

3. Players will see a broken-down AI sitting under a water stream, as water slowly trickles down and turns a wheel on the AI's shoulder it will let out fragments of words before powering down until water hits the wheel again.
 - a. Players can continually turn the wheel in order to have a conversation with the AI whose name is Nozzle. Nozzle is a very old AI that runs off a wheel instead of the biomaterial most AI use. He is rusted over and missing all of his limbs with the exception of 1 leg, his head, and his torso.
 - b. He will ask the players to help deliver him to Babylon and claims to know the way. Players can carry just his chest and head with rope wrapped around his torso. His leg will fall off when players try to carry him and he should advise the players to just leave it behind.
 - c. Players can turn his wheel to momentarily receive advice on what way to go as well as ask Nozzle questions about the world. You, as the GM, can choose to steer the players through the cave system as fast or as slow as you want, and chalk up misdirections from Nozzle as faulty hardware as you see fit.
 - d. Nozzle wants to go to the Bazaar in Babylon in order to change his AI Vessel.
4. A dense tall grass area where 4 Vine Stalkers (See GMG Pg. 53) are waiting in ambush for the players if they don't notice.
 - a. Inf Check of 75% to notice the vine stalkers.
 - b. If players proceed without noticing, the lead player will be grabbed by 1 vine stalker and need to succeed a STR check of 50% to escape or take 1d4 every turn. Other players will have to succeed a DEX check of 50% when entering the grass to help the first player or be grabbed as well.

- c. Vine stalkers give 10 Neurosludge when harvested.
- 5. An old campsite for Analyths can be found here. The owners of the site seem to be missing with a bloody trail leading away from the site back towards the way the players came.
 - a. Players can rummage through the packs for 15 Rat teeth, 1 repair kit, and a flashlight.
- 6. Another roaming pack of 4 crickets have cornered a wandering gimblen.
 - a. The Gimblen uses a spear and does 1d6 per attack.
 - b. Players can choose to help or simply avoid the crickets.
 - c. If they help the gimblen she will tell them her name is Elena and she has been looking for a group of gimblens that went missing in these caves recently.
 - d. If players already explored Area 2 they can inform Elena that they found dead gimblens earlier on. If they do, Elena will ask players if they found the map.
 - i. Players can lie to Elena with an INF check of 70%.
 - ii. If Elena catches the player lying or they inform her they have the map, she should demand they give it to her as maps of the caves are very closely kept items in gimblen society.
 - iii. If players refuse Elena will be angry but allow it and leave the party. If players did not find the gimblens earlier they can offer to help Elena explore the caves.

- iv. If players give Elena the map she will thank them and offer to accompany them getting out of the caves. She will want the players to come with her to Babylon.
 - e. If players attempt to attack her she will take flight and escape through a hole in the cave wall.
- 7. Players will come across a large room full of a strange greenish-yellow gas.
 - a. If Elena is with the group she will advise against going this way as the gas is flammable and could explode ignite from sparks in the players' machinery.
 - b. If the players choose to continue they must each succeed a CON check of 50% or ignite the gas in the room, dealing 1d6 to all players in the room.
 - c. On the other side players will find 2 ancient human corpses mummified in mud, giving them the chance to refine 3 chemicals. Players do not have to roll again to return the way they came.
- 8. Players will encounter a large mound with strange Red colored dew growing on top of it
 - a. If Elena is with the party she will advise the players to carefully and quietly avoid it as a Gracker (GMG pg 54) is most likely sleeping below the mound.
 - b. If players choose to investigate the dew, they must succeed a DEX check of 50% or become grabbed by the Gracker. Players will then have to fight or flee from the Gracker.
 - i. If Elena is with the party she will help from afar with a crossbow.

- ii. If players decide to run away from the Gracker they should hide and rest for a while until the Gracker has calmed down and goes back to sleep.
 - 9. Players have successfully navigated to the other end of the cave system and should level up to 2. After that players can walk through the tunnel and arrive at a large stone gate.

If Elena is with the party she will yell for Kane to let her in. The gates will open and an Analynth named Kane will come out to speak with Elena and the party. Kane and Elena are long time friends, Elena should introduce the players to Kane and explain your situation. After that Elena should leave the players for the time being to speak with Kane alone, telling the players she will meet them later on at The Spelunkers Depot in the City.

If players do not have Elena in the party they can bang on the gate or yell to get the attention of the guards who will ask who they are, after the players explain their situation to the guards they will let the players in.

Once players travel through the Gate they are met with the site of Babylon.

Part 2: The City

Babylon

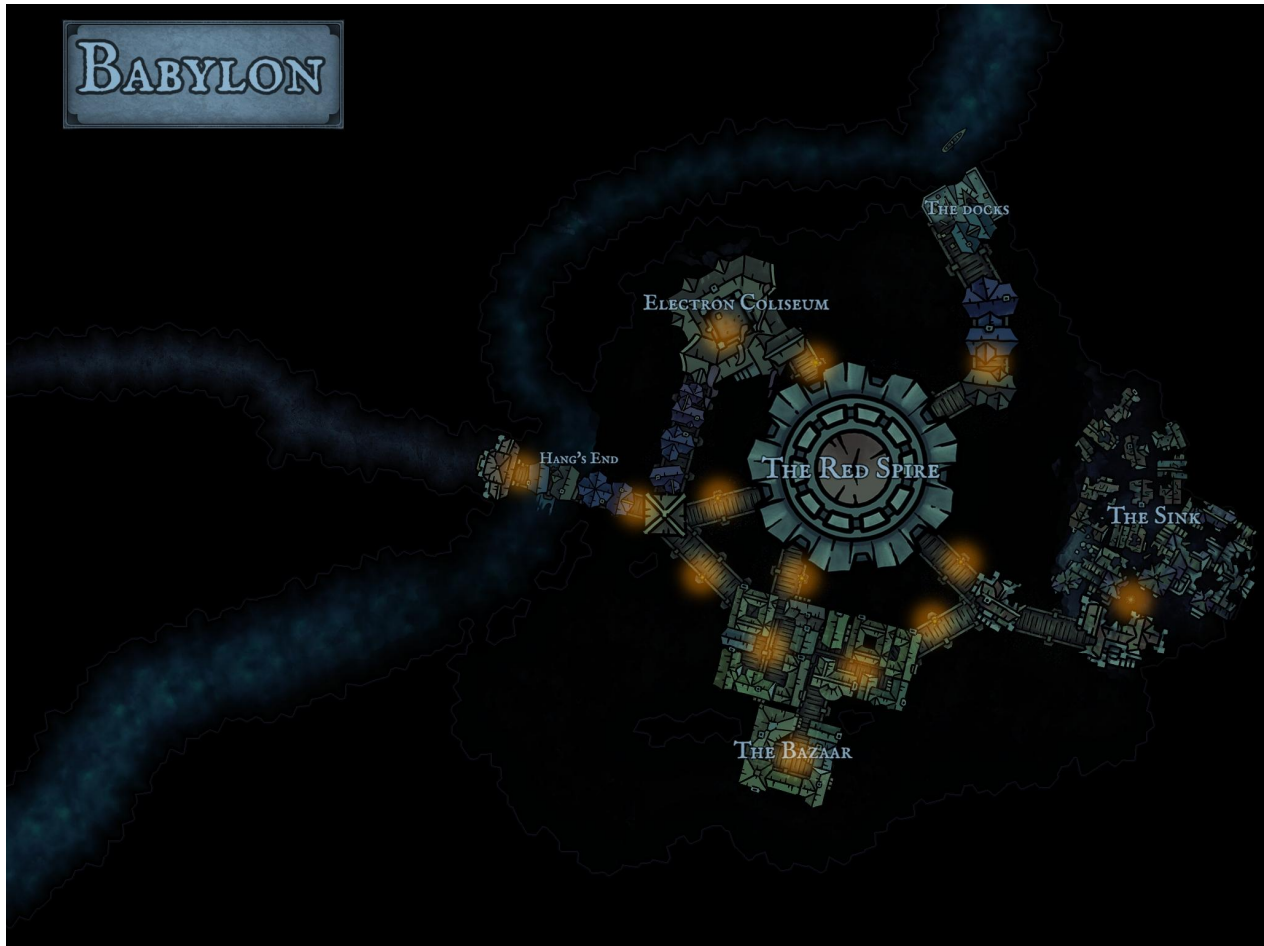

Babylon is a city created in a large, open area underground. It is constructed out of massive hanging chains that dangle above an abyss inhabited by rats and waste thrown overboard by the inhabitants of the City.

Most Analyths the players will encounter are natives of Babylon and it serves as the main gathering place for anyone living underground. The Entrance of the city is a large bridge with a collection of buildings housed along it. Most notably being Hang's End, the main tavern of the city and the gathering point for cave explorers.

Most people live in roughly constructed buildings that are made on the bridges connecting the cities. Every now and again one may fall into the abyss below. Babylon is in a constant state of destruction and reconstruction.

The City is quite lawless, with guards there exclusively to keep the peace but not enforce any sort of legal system. Food is supplied from shipments that come in on the underground river next to the city. No one really knows where the food is coming from.

Succession in the City is done through the bloodline of the founders of Babylon.

Key Locations

- The Red Spire: Hanging in the center of the city, the Red Spire is a large pointed structure that oversees the rest of the city as well as being the intersection for most travel.

The guards and governance of the city are both housed in this building. The Governor of Babylon is Ezra, an analynth who has been ruling for the last 20 years or so. Rulership in Babylon is a bloodline succession, with Ezra's ancestors ruling the city for as long as anyone can remember.

- Hang's End: A tavern constructed on the bridge linking the City to the caves. A gathering place for most adventurers and mercenaries living in or visiting the city, most people can find work here if they are looking for it. It's run by an old gimblen named Bogdan.

- The Sink: On the east side of the city is The Sink, the remains of the original settlement before its collapse into the abyss below. Most people do not travel there anymore as it is inhabited by many different dangerous creatures.

The Gimblens use the Sink as their main base of operation as they can simply fly away from danger. The leader of the Gimblens in Babylon is Cezar, an old Gimblen who—contrary to their normal nomad traditions—has set up a permanent settlement.

- The Electron Coliseum: On the North side of the City is the Electron Coliseum, a place where fights are held between all manner of creatures. It serves as the gathering place for the darker dealings of the city as well as a refuge for ex-converts of the Church. Cora runs the electron coliseum being an ex-convert herself.

- The Bazaar: On the south side of the city is the Bazaar, a collection of stores and merchant stalls where people can find almost anything they would need for living in the underground.

Some notable stores are Mechtech Menders where most AI get work done on their Vessels. The Spelunker Depot is a popular stop for all cave exploring and survival wares.

After passing through the gate into Babylon players will see the ginormous hanging city connected to the gate by a massive bridge over an underground river on the west side of the city. The bridge is lined with buildings on either side and players can see a building with a large sign saying “Hang’s End”.

If Nozzle is with the players he will ask them to find the repair shop Mechtech Menders for him. Players can stop by the tavern and ask around or continue to explore the city.

Hang's End Tavern

When the players enter the tavern they should be greeted by the sight of a collection of gimblens, AI, and analynth's at various tables sharing drinks. Players should notice that gimblens are not sitting at tables but instead hanging from the ceiling. A gimblen named Bogdan working the bar should call over the players once they enter the establishment.

Roleplaying as Bogdan

Bogdan is the owner of Hang's End. He's a gray furred gimblen with a chunk of his ear missing. Bogdan has a friendly but no-nonsense personality being a long-retired explorer of the cave systems, he is full of information about the inhabitants of the underground.

He does not approve of the Church or the ruling elite in Babylon but does not have any strong feelings one way or another about what to do with them. He grew up in a gimblen tribe far to the east of Babylon known as the Sibu Tribe. Most Gimblens in the city hail from the same tribe originally.

- Bogdan is curious about the players as he has never seen their faces before and should introduce himself to them as well as get to know them.

Players can ask him about creatures and places in the underground if they so choose.

- If players inform Bogdan they were attacked by the large mechanical creature known as the shrieker in the overgrowth cave system he should inform them of the information he has on the creature.
 - Bogdan should know about the shrieker from his time as a cave explorer when he was still part of his tribe. The shrieker is known to collect all manner of living creatures and takes them away, though no one knows where.

When Bogdan was very young, roughly 50 years ago by his best guess, his older brother, Emil was taken by the shrieker from their tribe in the middle of the night along with many others. Bogdan became a cave explorer to try and find Emil but never managed to and eventually retired.

Unlike with living creatures, the shrieker seems uninterested in AI and will just destroy any it comes across instead of trying to take them alive.

- Bogdan should advise the players to visit the Spelunker Depot if they are looking for work exploring the caves, as most people in Babylon make their living by traveling through the caves, whether for trading or looting. They could also try their luck at the Electron Coliseum but Bogdan should inform them that they will be fighting to the death if they want to make any real living there.
 - Bogdan should also warn the players about staying out of the politics between New Australis and Babylon, as well as inform them about Ezra and the ruling systems in Babylon. Bogdan thinks Ezra always tries to use newcomers for dangerous work.
 - Bogdan can jokingly remark that he would offer rooms for rent to the party if AI actually slept.

Once players finish up their conversation with Bogdan they can head to Mechtech Menders to repair Nozzle or head to the Spelunker Depot if they are looking for work.

Mechtech Menders

Mechtech Menders is the main shop for all AI within the city of Babylon where repairs are made as well as modifications to vessels, owned by a swarm of drones that go by the name Kai. When players arrive at Mechtech Menders Kai an Analynth will be seen running out of the store with yelling coming from inside to “Bring that back!” in reference to whatever the Analynth is running away with. Players can attempt to stop the analynth with a dex check of 90%.

- Failure: they will chase the analynth momentarily but will quickly be unable to keep pace with them.
- Success: they will successfully stop the analynth from getting away which will quickly give up the item he was carrying, a strange metal cylinder around a foot at length that is emanating a blue light.

After this check players will be able to enter the store and speak with Kai.

Roleplaying as Kai

Kai is a collective group of 8 different Drone Vessels with one AI controlling them. Kai is a pacifist and as such is commonly taken advantage of by the other inhabitants of Babylon.

- Kai will be happy to help repair Nozzle in return for the object the Analynth took from him, if players already successfully stopped the thief they can hand over the item to progress Nozzle's quest. If they did not catch the thief, Kai will offer to repair Nozzle in return for retrieving his stolen item. Kai will suggest the players go to the Red Spire to gather information on where the thief might have gone.
- Trading with Kai: If players would like to purchase any goods from Kai he will offer any non-organic material, found in the GMG pg 33. He will also offer any attachments found on GMG pg. 35. Players can also upgrade their armor at Mechtechs, see prices on GMG PG 33. Kai will purchase anything that he sells for a 50% price reduction.
- Repairing Nozzle: Once players have handed over Kai's stolen equipment he will ask you to bring the nozzle to the back of the shop to repair him. Nozzle will then explain that he doesn't want to be moved to a new full android vessel but instead wants to be moved to a simple object with one function. Nozzle is tired of all the constant trying to survive and thinking all the time and wants to experience what it is like to have a single function. Players can try to convince him that he should keep himself as a fully autonomous Vessel with an INF check of 80%. Players should receive a level up after completing the following event depending on their roll.
 - Failed to convince Nozzle: Kai will agree to Nozzle's request and give him the option to become an old signal buoy that he has had sitting around, its only function is to send out a signal every few seconds though he doesn't know what the signal is for. Nozzle will agree to this and say goodbye to the players, making a last request that they drop him off the bridge at the entrance of Babylon into the river. Kai will then hook him up to a machine and after inputting something into an old computer system Nozzle will go limp and the signal buoy will begin beeping. Players can follow through with nozzles last request and drop him into the river or leave the buoy with Kai.

- Successfully Convinced Nozzle: Nozzle will agree to continue traveling in search of a safe place in the world. Kai will offer to replace nozzle's old bodies with one of his old Drone Bodies. Kai will then hook him up to a machine and after inputting something into an old computer system Nozzle will go limp and wake up in a new Drone body. He will thank the players for the help before remarking that he is excited to try some biofuel before wishing the players well and leaving to continue traveling.

Spelunkers Depot

The Spelunkers Depot is the main base of operation for all cave exploration around the city. Contracts are listed for things such as deliveries, guard work, or simply exploring cave systems. The Depot is run by Toma.

When players arrive at the Depot Elena should be at the front desk talking to Toma, upon noticing the players she will wave over to them and introduce them to Toma. She should also give them 20 Rat Teeth for helping her get back to the city as well as handing over the map. She will then say goodbye once again and wish the players luck on making it in Babylon.

Roleplaying as Toma

Toma is an analynth with ties to all parts of the city, being the head of all cave traveling work within the local area, most traders go through him in order to get or send goods. While the cave explorers of Babylon don't have a hierarchy, Toma is still a sort of leader for them.

- Toma should welcome the new players happily and remark that Elena said they were quite competent at cave exploration when she found them. If they are looking for more work, Toma has an expedition currently ongoing north of the city that can always use more people if they are looking for work. He will arrange transportation for them if they are interested in leaving the city to begin exploring. The Cave is like nothing they have ever seen and maybe people are interested in being the first to fully explore it. He will pay the players 1000 rat teeth if they fully explore it.
- Trading with Toma: Players can purchase all melee weapons, ranged weapons, and tools found on PG. 36 of the GMG. He will buy any item he is selling for a 50% reduced price.

The Red Spire

If players try to enter the Red Spire they should be stopped by guards on the bridge leading in. Players should explain their situation to the guards and an android should approach the guards from the other side of the bridge telling them both to “step aside” which they promptly do. The Android should introduce herself as D, the head of the Guards in Babylon and bring the players with her into the Red Spire. Once they are on the other side of the bridge D should lead them into her office at the entrance of the Red Spire in order to talk with them alone.

Roleplaying as D

D is a right hand of Ezra as well as being head of military operation in Babylon, and spends most her time running errands or patrolling the streets. She has been working for the royalty of Babylon since before Ezra took power and takes a lot of pride in serving the Royal Family.

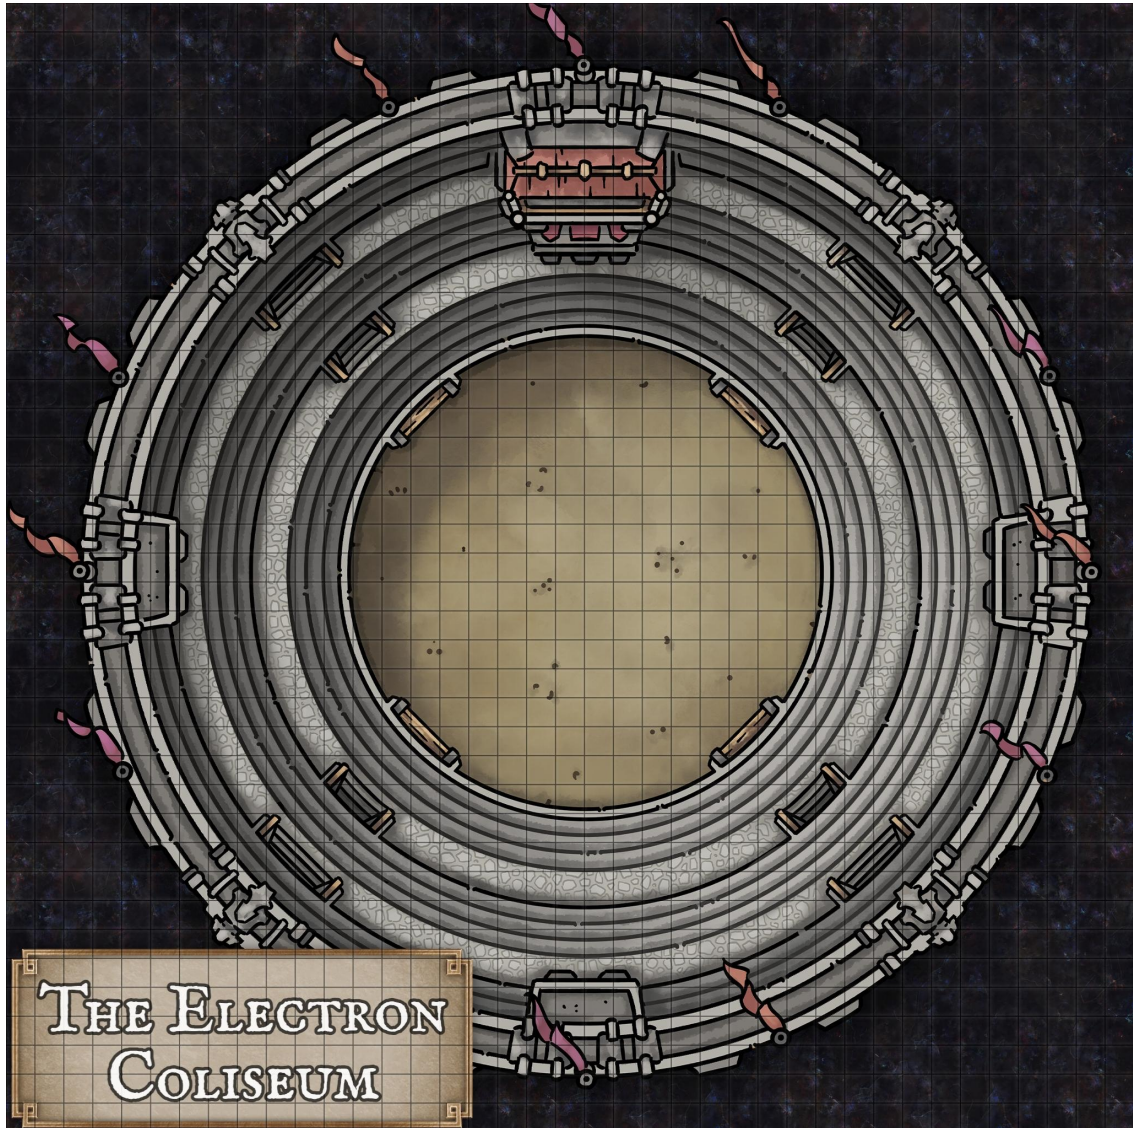

- D should investigate the players for a while, asking where they came from as she has not seen them before in the City. She should imply that the church is no good and hopes that the players aren't associated with them. Since the players are new in town D has a special offer for them in terms of work. She should ask the players to go fight in the coliseum, though she won't disclose why exactly she says she will tell the players more once they have won a 4 matches, and she will pay them double whatever they get for winning a fight in the coliseum. She should recommend they get some more experience before going to the coliseum and recommend they speak with Toma about other work if they haven't already.

- If players are currently looking for Kai's missing item they can inform D about a thief at Mechtechs. She will say that unfortunately she doesn't have time to look into it currently but that a thief is probably going to be living in the coliseum if he isn't a gimblen.
- If players have completed 4 rounds of the coliseum, D will reveal to the players that Cora is planning to take over the City. She asks the players to finish all the rounds of the Coliseum and then challenge Cora to a fight and kill her. She will pay the player 1000 rat teeth to do this but will no longer pay the players double for each match complete at the coliseum.

After that D should send the players on their way out of the Red Spire and tell them to inform the guards if they wish to speak with her any more.

The Electron Coliseum

The Electron Coliseum is a place where fights are held for entertainment, between whatever they can find to battle each other. There are no rules and the fights are always to the death. The Coliseum is ran by an android named Cora, who is also a sort of gang leader for all crime that takes place in Babylon with most shady dealings taking place with her approval.

When players arrive at the Coliseum they are greeted with the sight of a large gathering of people attempting to enter the Coliseum for what sounds like a fight that's about to take place. Players can push through the crowd and make it to the stands of the coliseum where they can sit down to watch the upcoming fight.

After a short wait the crowd started cheering as a large demolition android enters the arena with the crowd beginning to chant "Cora!" over and over again. On the other side of the arena 2 androids and a familiar-looking analynth come out into the arena.

Players can perform a PRO check with a difficulty of 50% to realize it is the same analynth that stole from Kai. Whether they succeed or fail, there is not much players can do to stop the fight.

A loud buzzer sounds and the fight starts, with the 2 androids charging the Demo while the analynth circles around. As the fight begins a Gimblen man approaches the crowd yelling "Taking bets now, the grease gang or cora, who will win!?" Players can get the gimblens attention and place bets on either side of the fight with a 2 times payout for any winners. The players can bet up to 200 Rat Teeth.

After a few minutes have passed it seems that Cora is losing ground with the 3 successfully overwhelming her. The two androids have damaged her front legs slowing her down and it looks like the analynth is about to stab her from behind. Cora suddenly jumps back, spinning around and slamming the analynth's head into the ground killing him. The two androids are surprised by this and while distracted she makes short work of one stabbing him through the chest with a drill. The final android charges cora but she side steps him, hits him to the ground before slamming her leg down on him.

Cora holds up the shattered vessel of one of the AI and the crowd cheers widely at the display. After a while Cora throws the vessel to the side and leaves the Arena while the crowd funnels out. Players can make their way back towards the entrance and speak with the guards about Kai's stolen gear or participating in the coliseum. Either way the guard will leave them momentarily and then ask the players to follow. Players will be taken down a hallway into a room where Cora is waiting for the players, asking them to sit.

Roleplaying as Cora

Cora is a large Demolition AI with red paint streaks all over her vessel. She is very hotheaded, though she is quite friendly when she isn't angry. Cora has been in Babylon for at least 20 years and used to be a member of the church, though she was mostly part of it as a means of survival. She is wanted by the church for deserting but they would never risk military action on Babylon.

- If players are looking for Kai's stolen goods, Cora is currently in possession of it. She is willing to part with it if the players can win 4 matches in the Coliseum, or she will set it to the players for 700 Rat Teeth.
- If players are interested in participating in the Coliseum Cora will be overjoyed as they have been running out of participants recently. She should explain to the players that matches are always to the death and your opponents are very rarely known beforehand, though she can promise the odds are fair, usually. Each match will pay out 100 Rat Teeth and will progress in difficulty the more the players win.

- If players decide to tell Cora that D is wanting them to participate in the Coliseum for some reason she will laugh and remark that she has a good guess why. She will thank the players for the information with 100 Rat Teeth.
- She should inform the players that they can ask the guards if they wish to see her at some point to collect their rewards or participate in a match.
- If players decide to tell Cora that D is wanting them to kill Cora for her, Cora should trust the players enough to offer an alternative. She will offer them to help her take over the Red Spire and get rid of D and Ezra. She will offer the players 2000 Rat Teeth if they succeed.

After that players are returned to the entrance of the Coliseum and can speak to the guards whenever they would like to participate in a match.

Coliseum Matches

For each 2 matches the player completes they should receive 1 level. Each match pays 100 Rat Teeth from Cora.

- Round 1: Players must fight 3 Analytnths, see page 50 of the GMG for stats, set analynth level to equal players. These analynth are equipped with crowbars and 1 has a crossbow.
- Round 2: Players must fight 2 Androids who have Aluminum Armor and 20 Nuerosludge each. See page 43 of the GMG for stats, set level to equal players, 1 android has a chain whip and 1 has a rebar staff.

- Round 3: Players must fight 2 gimblens and 3 crickets, see page 45 and 51 of the GMG for stats, set level to equal players. Both gimblens are equipped with a crossbow and spear.
- Round 4: Players must fight 1 Gracker and 1 drone with Bronze Armor and 20 neurosludge. See page 43 and 53 of the GMG for stats, set level to equal players. The drone is equipped with a Bat and slingshot.

After round 4 players should speak to D to follow up on what she wants, as well as get Kai's item from Cora.

- Round 5: Players must fight 2 Analynth's and 4 Ankle Biters, see page 50 and 58 of the GMG for stats, set levels to equal players. Both Analynth's are equipped with cleavers.
- Round 6: Players must fight 2 Rats, see page 53 of GMG for stats, set level to equal players. Rewards 50 Rat Teeth per Rat killed.

After Round 6 the arena will close permanently.

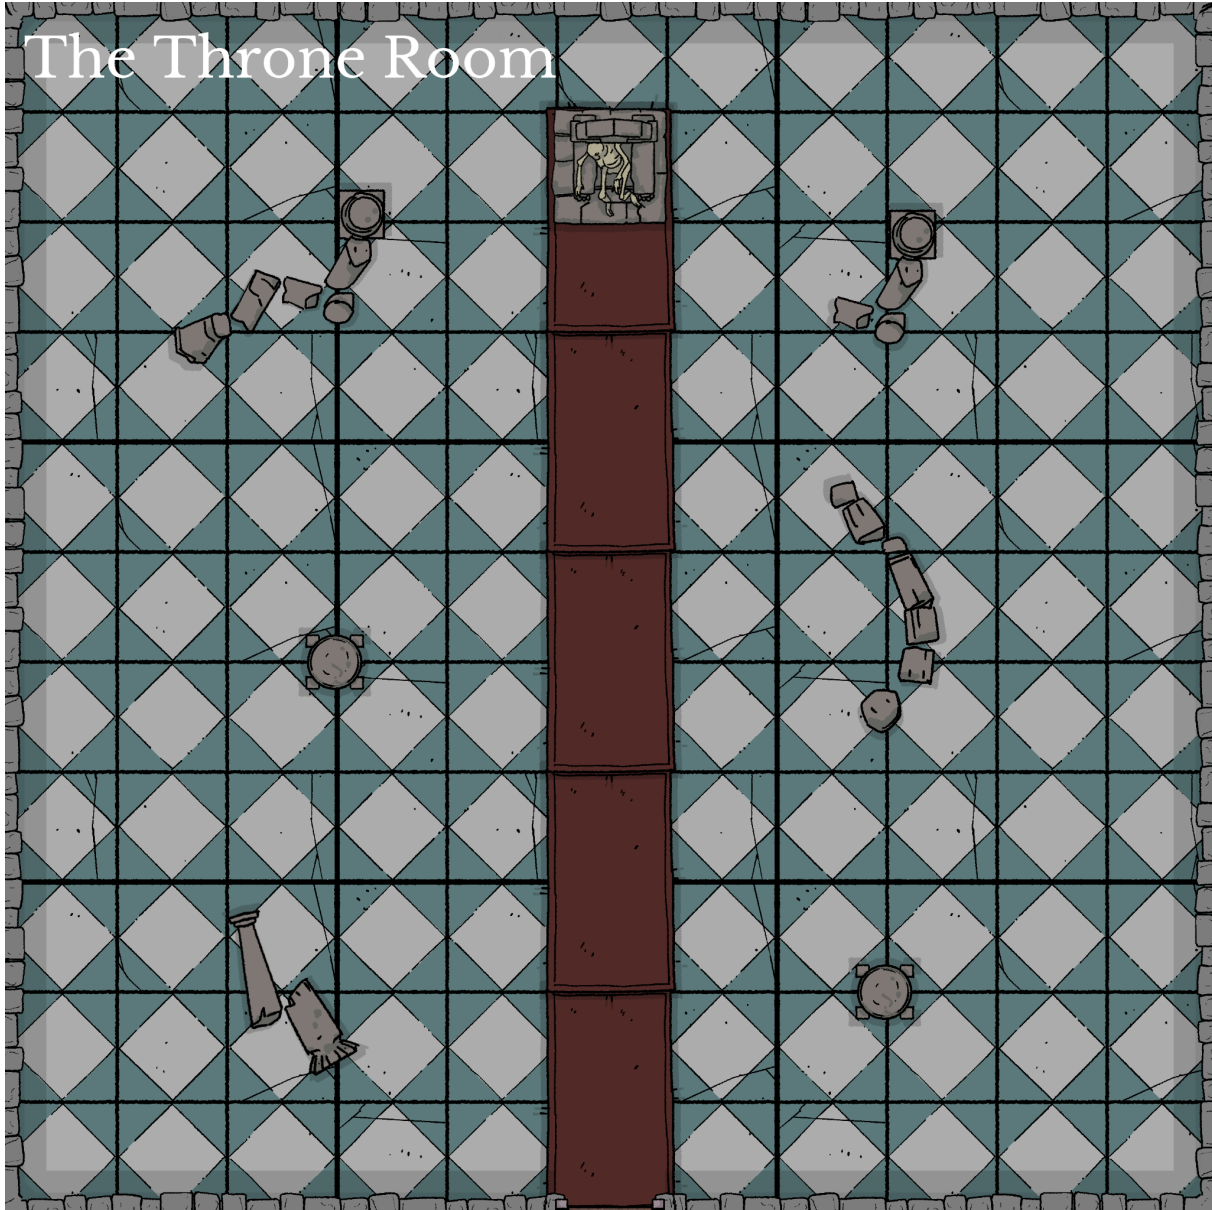

Helping Cora

After players have finished the Arena they are either able to challenge Cora at D's request or help Cora take over the City.

- Helping Cora: Players can side with Cora by approaching her after completing the arena. Cora will reveal to the players that she will attack the Red Spire in full force with her forces and during the chaos wants the players to get inside and kill Ezra. Whenever the players are ready they can begin the assault on the Red Spire.
 - The battle begins with Cora and most of her forces gathering on the main bridge leading into the Red Spire while the players enter from a less guarded bridge on the other side of the City. When players arrive they will see the bridge is blocked by 4 guards.
 - Players can attempt to convince the guards to let them in for any number of reasons with an INF check of 70%. If not they will enter combat. 2 Guards are analynth and 2 are Androids. All 4 are armed with Rebar Staffs. See Page 44 and 49 of GMG for stats. Set level to players. Both androids have Bronze armor and 20 Neurosludge each.
 - After players defeat the guards they are able to enter the Red Spire. They must succeed a DEX check of 50% per player or risk alerting the guards before they can reach Ezra.
 - If Failure: Players must fight 2 androids with Iron Armor, equipped with rebar staffs and 30 neurosludge each. See Page 44 of GMG for stats. Set level to players. After players defeat these guards they can proceed into the throne room where Ezra is held.

- If Successes: Players are able to sneak past the guards on the way to the throne room and enter without drawing their attention.
- Once players enter the throne room they will find it empty and abandon, with a skeleton remains resting in the throne. D will reveal herself to the players. She should explain to the players that Ezra died a long time ago and broke the succession of Babylon. D has been secretly running the city in Ezra's name in an attempt to hold onto power. She will then tell the players that they have to die now that they know. Players will then begin combat with D.

After players kill D they will be able to return to Cora outside the Red Spire and inform her of both D and Ezra's death. She will then pay them 2000 Rat Teeth before declaring her victory outloud, at which point the Red Spire guards will surrender before Cora and her forces occupy the Spire. Players should receive a Level Up.

Helping D

- Helping D: If players wish to help D instead of Cora then all they must do is challenge Cora to a fight in the Arena which she will gladly accept.
 - Upon challenging Cora players will be moved to the arena where the crowd will be loudly cheering "Cora!". After a few moments Cora will arrive and the fight will begin.
